THURSDAY EVENING, JUNE 13.

ATTORNEY GENERAL MILLER, who says the President will not knowingly appoint any man to office who drinks or is given to profenity, in his letter to Judge Sandford, re moving him from the place of chief justice of Utah, also says the Judge was removed because the President was satisfied that he was not in harmony with his policy in respect of Utah affairs. Judge Sandford, in his reply, says: "If the President of the United States has any policy which he desires a judge of the supreme court to carry out in reference to Utah affairs, other than the one I have pursued, you may say to him that he has done well to remove me." Most people believe that the duty of judges is to expound the law, and that they bave as little to do with politics, Presidential or otherwise, as the man in the moon. But, according to Mr. Milier, such a belief is entirely erroneous. It is currently reported that the President intends to appoint Mr. Miller an Associate Justice of the U.S.Supreme Court, because he was his law partner. When Mr. Miller shall be a member of that court, will his decisions be rendered in accordance with other people's policies? What will the other members of that court think of their asso ciate who says that his reason for removing a judge was that the judge referred to was not in harmony with the policy of the Presi-

IN THE interview between the President and the "kicker's" committee yesterday, the President is reported to have said that Mr. Clarkson, Assistant Postmaster General, had denied to him that he had made any such statement concerning the necessity of General Mahone's endorsement upon applications for office, as he was reported to have made to Mr. Agnew, of this city. Mr. Agnew's word is as good as his bond wherever he is known. Those who like him least never doubt his veracity. He says that Mr. Clarkson told him just what was printed on the subject referred to, the truth of which the President says Mr. Clarkson denies. But it is remembered that Mr. Harrison, though he ordered the militia to load with bullets to shoot down the strikers at Indian apolis, denied, when a candidate for Presi dent, having done so, and that Mr. Clarkson | celed. denied having bough: the stolen subscription list of the Voice, though the editor of that temperance paper swears he did. There is a gross falsehood out, but it does not lie at the door of Mr. Agnew.

THE PHILADELPHIA Record, a great admirer of ex President Cleveland says:

"The assurance has been given by the civi service commission that all competitors in the examinations will have equal chances. But how about the equal chances for appointment? Mr. Superintendent Bell, for example, will go through a great many lists before he will let any democrat have a clerkship in the railway postal service."

So called civil service reform was the rock upon which Mr. Cleveland was wrecked. Even his most devoted followers see that in a country in which there is a regular quadrennial fight between two parties for possession of the government, the party that hopes to win can not afford to do without the services of its workers, and that those workers not only expect, but deserve recom pense.

MR. OBERLY, formerly chief of the civil service commission, but more recently commissioner of Indian Affairs, has been removed in order that his place might be givon to an officer of negro troops during the war. It is said that Mr. Oberly is the only democratic ex office holder who bagged to be retained. Mr. Oberly and ex-President Cleve land once were in complete accord on the civil service question, and were so much en amored of civil service reform that they made the civil service rules even more ob jectionable than the civil service laws. Whether they still agree on the question is not definitely known.

THE FACT that Roderick R. Batter, who was convicted, when a member of Congress, of accepting a bribe for the appointment of a West Point cadet, received the unanimous endorsement of all the southern republicans in the present Congress for the position of Commissioner of the Indian Bureau, goes far to sustain Mr. John Wise's famous opinion of southern republicans : that they "are apostates for the price of their apostacy."

They say that though Gen. Groner told the Presi dent plainty that unless he did something to satisfy the Virginia republicans who are opposed to boss rule, that class of republicans could not be held responsible for future republican defeats in their State, and that though Gov. Cameron told him that they, the "kickers," were recognized by the same body that nominated him, he gave them no satisfactory reply. They also say that when ex-Congressman Brady assured him on his honor as a man and a soldier that Mr. Clarkson had told Mr. Agnew that General Mahone's endorse was a requisite for successful applications at the Postoffice Department. the President interrupted him before he had concluded his remarks, and said that Mr. Clarkson had denied baying made any such statement, and that he did not want to hear | further disturbance.

any more about it. Mr. Agnew says he will make affidavit that Mr. Clarkson not only did tell him so, but looked over the applications he had handed him, and, picking out those endorsed by General Mahone, said he would approve them. Ex-Senator Riddleberger says the President knows nothing about the real condition of affairs in Virginia, though he thinks he knows everything about them. Several of the other kickers say the only thing left for them now to do is to organize their wing of the party for the next State campaign and by the vote they cast show the President how egregiously General Ma-hone and the General's supporters among the republicans here and in the North have deceived him about the General's strength. Ex Congressman Brady is evidently very sore, but tries to put the best face on the affair. He says no politician is ever satisii d, and that if his own brother were Presidept, he would not be satisfied about an appointment for a friend until he had the commission in his hand.

General Mahone bas endorsed the application of Mr. Hudson for the postoffice at King George Court House, Va. The Gen-eral signs applications, as he registers his name at hotels, with the single word "Ma-

Dr. D. D. Miller, a prominent physician of Rappahannock county, died at his resi-dence near Sperr, ville on last Friday, after an illness of several months, in the 58th year

It is said that when the executive committee meets in Richmond on the 19th instant a strong effort will be made to fix upon Tuesday, the 14th day of August, for the meeting of the convention, though many of the gentlemen who will be in Richmond on the 19th of June will insist on making it a week later-the 21st of August.

On Monday a circular saw 56 inches in di ameter in the mills of R. R. Thomas, at Raynor, Isle of Wight county, while running at theirate of 650 revolutions per minute, and cutting up an oak log 18 inches through, suddenly burst into 15 pieces, scattering the fragments in every direction and wrecking the mill. One of the flying pieces struck Mr. Thomas on the right hip, inflicting a painful wound, and another struck him in

Norfolk on the charge of having set fire to the residence of Rev. F. C. Clarke, in Prin cess Anne county, by which five lives were lost, has made a partial confession. When arrested he stated that he knew that he had to die, and asked for time to pray. It appears that Mr. Clarke gave Coffee notice that he had to move from his place, when Coffee made a remark that if he moved he (Mr. Clarke) "would also coon be moved."
At the Dunkards meeting at Harrison

burg yesterday, divorce was one of the things considered. This question has been before the order for about fifty years. The sense of the convention is against divorces. but they are not unanimous in this opinion. Some think that for sufficient cause there should be divorces, but that neither party should marry again. The meeting voted down the motion to encourage local option on the ground that the general rules of the ingly nervous, displaying a great deal of church forbid taking part in any exciting political events. The question as to whether a sister could, according to the Gospel, represent a local church at an annual council as a delegate was decided in the negative.

A story of a lively nature comes from Hollies Baptist Church, seven miles from Odancock, in Accomack county. Several days ago two well known and respectable women met in the church and one of them, a pretty brunette of about 25 years, who suspected that her husband was too intimate with the son. And I advise you to prepare yourself other, who is about 30, "gave the latter a piece of her mind." In a moment the o'der woman struck the other a powerful blow on the jaw and at the same time dexterously inserted one of her hands in the brunette's dark locks, giving them a pull that threatened to uproot them, scalp and all. Then the younger woman, wild with rage and pain, proceeded to thump her opponent vigorously on the nose. By this time neither was as pretty as she had been. They were pulled apart with their faces scratched, bruised and bleeding. Both were promi

The Fauquier Tragedy. A letter from The Plains received at this office yesterday says: "The tragedy which occurred on Sun day last and which I see noticed in the GA ZETTE was a most distressing one. Nothing in this community has happened for many years that has so startled and distressed us, the family of Mr. E. C. Turner being so widely and favorably known and being at all times quiet, most gentlemanly and bonorable, and high toned in all their dealings and associations with their neighbors. The blow has fallen upon this community with a heavy weight. Nothing but what they considered a religious duty would have caused the young men to visit their brother in-law, and to demand of him honorable treatment of their dearly loved sister. They had so long borne with him, that patience ceased to be a virtue, and they well knew the dangers they were encountering, when they attacked a man whose reputation for fatal encounters was so well known."

The following is Mr. E. C. Turner's state ment in reference to the shooting : 'We had gotten about fifty or reventy-five yards down in the field, in front of the yard, when we heard him calling after us and pursuing in a brisk walk, a pistol in each hand. Cannot be positive what he said, as he talks low, but thinks it was the like of this: 'Hold on there! Hold on there! This thing cannot stop here.' We walked on, slacked our pace somewhat, he coming faster than we were going, getting nearer and had the pistol in his pocket, 'We had better right about and forbid his coming nearer,' which we did, but which he did not regard. My brother drew his pistol, and he (Edward P. Turner) said something. I cannot be positive what, but it sounded like this: Ah! you have one, have you?' He continued to approach when my brother raised and leveled his pistol at him; he stopped and leveled his at my brother. They both fired. I cannot say which fired first-very little difference-and then they both repeat I think it was the second shot that killed my brother. I then took the pistol from my brother's hand, and Edward P. Turner and I shot at each other until all my balls were gone. I said to him, 'I have no more shots,' which I don't think he heard. and he fired again. I said again, 'I have no more shots.' Then he lowered his pistol more shots.' and came towards us. As soon as the shooting cassed I stooped down, put my hand upon my brother and called his name. did not answer. By that time Elward had gotten to my side. He offered me his pistol and said, 'Kill me; I do not want to live. I said, 'I do not want to kill you.' sisting, I said, 'I do not want to kill yon; you can kill yourself if you want.'"

Paul Keys Convicted.

The trial of Paul Keys, colored, for committing a criminal assault on Alice Ballard. the six-year-old daughter of Mr. Arthur Ballard, of Fredericksburg, was concluded in that city yesterday evening, the jury returning, after an absence of seven minutes, with a verdict of guilty and fixing death as his punishment. Upon the announcement of the verdict the prisoner became exceedemotion. The prisoner was asked if he had anything to say in regard to the verdict, and replied in a feeble voice, "Yes, sir. I desire to say that the public excitement which has existed has prevented me from having a fair trial. That is all, sir." Judge Wallace then commanded him to stand, and in sentencing him said: "You have not only hear given a fair trial, but have been most warmly, ably and z-alously defended by your counsel, Mr. A. H. Dickinat once for the incvitable doom which awaits you, for you cannot expect any mercy for the atrocious crime for which you have been tried and convicted by a fair and impartial jury, and I sentence you to be hanged on Friday, September 6, 1889, be tween the hours of twelve and three." During the examination of witnesses on Tuesday the commonwealth's attorney be came excited, demanding the protection of the court for Mrs. Ba lard, and at the same time advancing toward counsel for the de-fense, threatening to strike him if he did sist reflecting upon her character. As Mr. Dickinson counsel for Keys, was leaving the court-house yard a great crowd gather-

ICOMMUNICATED.

In view of the heat of the present season and of its certain increase and duration for several months, the attention of the public authorities should be called, without delay, to the condition of the southern portion of this city. Particular mention should be made of the intersection of Royal and Glbbon streets and of that section traversed by issuing from the tan yard, carrying their black and pestilential waters through this entire portion of the town. The stench now coming from the vats of the tan yard is enough to produce malignant epidemics of every kind.
